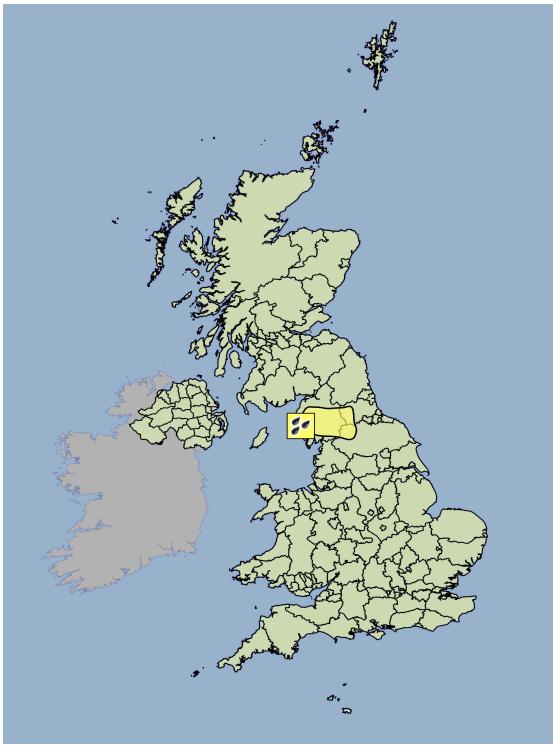
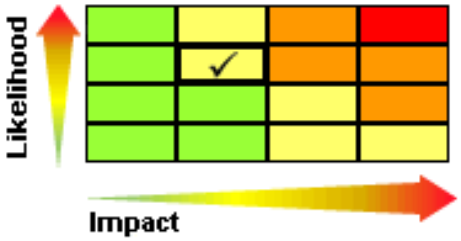
National Severe Weather Warning Service





Chief Forecasters Assessment
A front will move slowly southwards across the area today. Until it clears through, a feed of moisture-laden air will be forced to rise as it hits the hills of the Lake District and Pennines, releasing heavy rain and swelling water courses.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Warning of Rain

Valid from 10:30 on Wed, 11th Nov 2015 until 16:00 on Wed, 11th Nov 2015

Persistent rain, heavy at times, will continue until around mid afternoon before clearing slowly from the north. A further 40 mm rainfall is likely on hill tops.

The public should be aware of the risk of local flooding.

This is an update to extent the end time of the warning.
